

Cadaveric donation rates are falling.

(Organs from dead people)

There are very long transplant waiting lists for organs.

Thousands of patients die whilst waiting for an organ.

Living donation provides excellent results for the donor and the recipient.

Money does not change hands in countries with proper regulation.

Living donation is a good and sound means of saving lives

Supporting living donation is not the same as supporting an illegal and immoral trade in organs

Stopping living donation will cause thousands of premature deaths

Without living donation kidney patients will have to stay (and probably die) on dialysis.

Living, altruistic, paired and pooled donation enable members of a family, or friends, to save the life of a loved one whether or not their own organs are a blood and tissue type transplant match.

www.kidney.org.uk

National Kidney Federation - a UK charity run by kidney patients, for kidney patients.

This advert has been paid for by the Kidney patients themselves.